NOTES
AgriCorps

AgriCorps is a Peace Corps–type organization that sends American agriculture volunteers to the developing world to teach agriculture. AgriCorps uses youth to transfer agricultural technology into farming communities. Young people and their families will have access to improved agricultural technology, which allows them to increase their yields and contribute to food security. AgriCorps exists to expand people’s consciousness. We give young people and farmers the tools to empower themselves and shape their own reality. We believe in the transformative nature of the international experience for members of the AgriCorps. We believe they will create authentic partnerships within the communities they serve. We believe they will return to the United States as stronger individuals better prepared for their career choices and that they will continue to serve and contribute in many contexts.

BJE produces almost any type of poultry exactly to customers’ specifications. We are currently growing guineas, laying pullets, floor layers, broilers, roasters, and turkeys. BJE offers complete programs for organic, antibiotic-free, and commercial poultry. We also provide on-farm food safety and poultry welfare certifications to meet any customer’s requirements. BJE can manage every phase of poultry production from placement scheduling through marketing and movement of end product. BJE has housing available and is here to serve all production needs.

Kreamer Feed
Kreamer Feed has the capacity to produce and deliver more than 150,000 tons of specialized feeds per year. With more than 65 years of experience and a staff of knowledgeable professionals, Kreamer Feed offers an array of services to meet the demands of our customers and animal species. At Kreamer Feed we continually reinvest in our plant and equipment to improve our processes and capabilities. A few of our recent additions include an automated truck load out system, updated manufacturing system, and new steel ingredient bins. We take great pride in that fact that our quality control program exceeds Food and Drug Administration and Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture regulations. Our ingredient and feed samples are continually monitored for nutrient specifications for each lot of feed manufactured and each lot delivered. Our commercial facility is approved for the inclusion of Series 1900 drugs for the prevention and treatment of animal diseases. Our technical staff is capable of recommending the proper diet to improve the health of your animals, regardless of the species. Our experienced and knowledgeable staff can design a feed program and diet to specific requests. From chicks to dairy, at Kreamer Feed we provide high-quality materials for both pets and high-performance animals. We currently have more than 40 organic formulas on file for many species. Check out our stock feeds listed on our organic products webpage. We have the ability to customize orders to make small or large quantities of bagged or bulk special orders.

Lock Haven University

The Lock Haven University Physician Assistant Program represents the first master’s degree entry-level program within the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education. The 24-month program leads to a master’s of health science degree, which is awarded by Lock Haven University, and a certificate as a physician assistant. The program incorporates a module-based teaching format that students find to be very attractive, and extensive use of small-group learning, service-learning strategies, and a variety of clinical experiences. Students and graduates highly rate the quality of their educational experience and their preparedness for entry-level clinical practice. While emphasizing primary care, program graduates work in a variety of clinical settings, including surgery and surgical subspecialties, pediatrics, OB/GYN, orthopedics, internal medicine, and others. In addition to the core physician assistant education, students concentrate their studies on the care of underserved populations.

Nationwide

From the day this company was created by farm and cooperative leaders in 1909, our sole focus has been protecting and sustaining agriculture. Our company was started to help protect against devastating elevator fires where damages and loss could cause financial pain that rippled through agricultural and rural communities. Today, Nationwide is a leading commercial agribusiness insurer and the number-one insurer of farms in the country. We remain focused on providing industry-leading service and coverage to our customers whether they are farms, ranches, or commercial agribusinesses.

Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission

Founded in 1866, the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission (PFBC) is charged with protecting, conserving, and enhancing the Commonwealth’s aquatic resources, including waterways (streams, rivers, lakes, reservoirs, and wetlands), fish, reptile, and amphibian communities and habitats of game and nongame species. From stocking waterways and measuring the health of native aquatic populations to patrolling lakes and restoring habitats, the commission’s employees strive to protect, manage, and restore the resource. Our “Resource First” management philosophy ensures that staff will make scientifically informed decisions based on long-term conservation of aquatic resources. The PFBC is governed by a board of commissioners whose ten members are appointed by the governor. Day-to-day operations are overseen by the executive director.

Sterman Masser Inc. was formed in 1970 to produce and distribute quality potatoes. They used the original storage built in 1952 and added a small packing shed attached to it to house a packing line. In 1978, a large addition was added to increase storage capacity, add a cooling facility, and enlarge the packing area. By 1990, expansion continued with a computerized packing line installed, more acres farmed, and additional cooler space built. In 1998, the most recent expansion was started with the building of a separate computerized storage facility, a packing shed, the installation of a new packaging line, and additional cooler facility. In 1999, the farm was expanded to 3,000 acres with 500 acres of potatoes and the packing and distribution of more than 70,000,000 pounds of potatoes.

NOTES
The National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) is the statistical center of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). More than 400 official reports issued annually by NASS help ensure an orderly flow of goods and services among output, supply, and marketing sectors of agriculture. A combination of rapidly changing agriculture, new statistical methods, and computer technology, coupled with responsibility to conduct the Census of Agriculture, makes this an exciting and challenging era for NASS professionals. Career opportunities arise in all the 46 field offices and in Washington, D.C.

The Westervelt Company

In 1884, Herbert Westervelt began a career in the paper industry, developing Prairie States Paper Corporation, now known as The Westervelt Company. Realizing the importance of nature as a major resource in the paper-making business, the Westervelt family instilled an appreciation for the environment and its conservation. Appreciation of conservation facilitated our evolution from a manufacturing to a land resource management organization. With over half a million acres of timberlands, we continue to grow with the land serving as our guide. Today, we focus on businesses that sustain our natural resources for the future. We are stewards of the land.
