

2019 STEM OPEN HOUSE

On October 10 – 13th the graduate school will host the 2019 Penn State STEM Open House. Underrepresented undergraduate students who plan to enroll in graduate school will be visiting our campus from universities across the United States. Students who express an interest in majors in the College of Agricultural Sciences will have an opportunity to visit those departments and meet with faculty, staff and graduate students. The college visits are scheduled for Friday, October 11th – one session in the morning and one in the afternoon. If students select your department to visit, please welcome them. This is an opportunity for them to look at us as a potential graduate school and for us to look at them as a potential graduate student. More information will be sent directly to those departments who may be involved.

MINORITY ALUMNI PANEL/VISIT

Five successful alumni have been invited to return to the College of Agricultural Sciences on November 5th and 6th. As a part of their visit, there will be an open forum for students, faculty and staff to engage with these alumni regarding their current fields of employment, their recommendations on successfully completing a college degree in ag, and their recommendations for being successful in the “real world” of work. All students, faculty and staff are invited to attend this session which will occur during the early afternoon of November 5th. Flyers will be circulated to share with students. Please encourage attendance by students who are able to attend during the panel discussion.
